Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness of 10-year-old children. The study was conducted in a primary school in the city of Ankara, Turkey. The study group consisted of 20 children (10 boys and 10 girls) who were randomly selected from the school. The children were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The control group did not participate in any physical education program, while the experimental group participated in a 12-week training program. The physical fitness of the children was measured at the beginning and at the end of the 12-week period. The measurements included heart rate, blood pressure, and body mass index. The results of the study showed that the experimental group had significantly higher heart rates and blood pressures at the end of the 12-week period compared to the control group. The body mass index of the children in the experimental group also increased significantly. These findings suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical fitness of 10-year-old children.

Variable	Coefficient	Standard Error	t-statistic	p-value
Age of the head of household	0.001	0.000	1.234	0.215
Gender of the head of household (Male = 1, Female = 0)	-0.050	0.020	-2.500	0.012
Constant	1.500	0.100	15.000	0.000

The regression results indicate that the age of the head of household has a positive but statistically insignificant effect on the number of children in the household. The gender of the head of household has a negative and statistically significant effect, suggesting that households headed by females tend to have fewer children than those headed by males.
