Abstract
 The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were 20 men, aged 40-50 years, who were sedentary and had no history of cardiovascular disease. They were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The exercise group performed a 12-week training program consisting of aerobic and resistance training. The control group did not exercise. Physical fitness was measured by a 10-minute step test, and health was measured by a health questionnaire. The results showed that the exercise group had significantly higher physical fitness and better health than the control group after 12 weeks of training.
