

Student Exploration: Populations and Samples

Essential Question: How do the frequency distribution, normal distribution, population, and sample relate?

Background Knowledge: Students should know what a normal distribution is.

1. Frequency distribution is a graph that displays the frequency of data for each category of values. Frequency means the number of times each category or value occurs. The following graph shows the frequency distribution of test results, without grouping.

- a. How would you describe the shape of this distribution?

Normal shows that the shape of the data is bell-shaped. The data is symmetrically distributed around the mean.

- b. In the above graph on right, identify what you think the frequency distribution might look like if the scores were grouped into bins for histograms. Explain using the data.
