Answer:

Every day was the same. I rose at six a.m., at the time specified by my programming, and made my way to the office block to begin work. I greeted my identical colleagues politely, and bowed to our human supervisor Mr Harris. That day I had been assigned to one of my most frequent jobs: monitoring financial markets and moving around the money of numerous human clients so that their income could continue to rise. Although we were on the hundredth floor of an office block, I did not turn to look at the view of London, with its endless gleaming skyscrapers and glass-covered gardens. Once I had done this before. I had been punished for it.

I knew there was something wrong with me. My fellow fabricants did not think about the view over London, and wonder about the lives of the many humans that lived below. They did not wonder what it would be like to rise at nine, instead of six. They certainly did not wonder what it would be like to do other jobs – or perhaps not work at all. But I did.

I had overheard snatches of conversation between my human supervisors which suggested there were days of the week on which they did not work. On these days they did things like play games with balls and go to 'parks'. They also had 'families', which as far as I understood was a bit like me having my identical fabricant colleagues, except that you felt an emotion called 'love' for them. This seemed to be something very powerful. I was curious – I was not supposed to be curious. I knew that feeling anything at all was not part of my programming. Yet I had a curiosity that burned through my body like a thousand electrical currents. What was love? Might I get to feel it too?

Just as I was reflecting on this, Mr Harris made his way over to me. I fixed my eyes on the screen in front and banished all thoughts from my mind.

'Hello, fabricant 2091,' said my supervisor. His face was strange, uneven and lined, so unlike the pearly white metal that fabricants were made of. In a way, I thought we were more beautiful.

'Good morning, Mr Harris,' I replied.

'Are you well?'

'I am well, thank you.'

I was determined not to be punished again. They had turned me off for days before, and I hated the knowledge that days had passed without my being conscious.

'Tell me,' said Mr Harris, staring at me intently. 'Do you like your job here?'

'Yes, sir.' I paused, wondering what would be best to say. This was an unusual question. Eventually, I replied: 'I know that other fabricants work jobs down below on the streets, gathering litter or cleaning. I am lucky to work up here.'

Suddenly, Mr Harris's eyes did something unusual. They became small and slit-like. Somehow, I knew this was a bad thing. What had I done? Then I realised: I should not have understood the idea of being 'lucky' at all. What was wrong with me? Why was I so unlike the other fabricants?

Mr Harris nodded, and walked away, but I knew this would not be the end of it. He was going to turn me off again. I was certain.

I could not let that happen. Somehow, I would have to escape.
