praxis are very relevant to notions such as reflective teaching and the discourse on teachers as professionals. By raising the possibility that the new tradition of Didaktik can be highly suggestive for thinking through issues related to a number of central ideas within contemporary discourse and for exploring the implications of these ideas for both teacher education and for a curriculum theory appropriate to these new contexts for theorizing this book opens up a gold mine of theoretical and practical possibilities.

Reflective Teaching as Professional Practice Theophilus Kofi Gokah, 2014

The content of this book is an important trajectory in teaching and learning. It does not only explore teacher understanding and practice of reflective teaching and how teacher practitioners internalise the act in their teaching practice but adds to ongoing debates about the dynamic mix of teachers' approach to teaching. The reported study is exploratory, based on small samples from two places: Cardiff in UK and Madina in Ghana. Its ethos is to compare any differences in understanding and practice of reflective teaching. Drawing on qualitative exploratory case study, the research found that teachers' conceptualisation of reflective teaching in both cases was mixed. Teachers in one case study seem to be aware of teaching evaluation as a concept in teaching and not reflective teaching. Whether a lack of awareness in what reflective teaching is is synonymous to lack of knowledge is a matter of debate. Reflective teaching, no doubt, is theorised in academic literature but its practice can be sticky in the classroom and other learning environments. It is that patchy subject which remains the focus of various enquiries, including this reported study and the concern of many education authorities. After all, debates about quality teaching and learning are often subsumed in these debates In order for any generalisations to be made from outcomes reported in this monograph may require larger samples and careful utilisation
