

Study Guide: Physical and Chemical Oceanography

Effective composition of seawater is determined by:

- 1) Primary salinity - given amount of dissolved solids with respect to total weight, freshwater composition consists of 96.5% water and 3.5% solids
- 2) Source - water moving through salt balance from atmosphere through evaporation and precipitation, and ice melting/refreezing, resulting in different salinities, densities and chemical composition
- 3) Secondary salinization process - physical/chemical processes, biologically induced changes and biological, mineralization of organic matter for future storage and release

Effective salinity and composition on density:

- 1) Temperature - more important, decreases density
- 2) Salinity - increases density, increases temperature, decreases density

How temperature and salinity produce density, water volume expansion/contraction:

Temperature differences alone cause density:

- 1) warm water takes about 1000 kg/m³, cold water is more dense
- 2) warm, less dense water is floating on a colder, denser water mass
- 3) when the temperature decreases, density is the main property is affected so is the structure

Salinity differences cause density:

- 1) water takes at least 1000 kg/m³ the density of water increases
- 2) water with higher salinity, and lower density, floats on top of water with higher salinity
- 3) density (mass) increases as salinity increases, density increases
- 4) the higher the salinity the more difficult to change the density as the temp increases

Effect:

How temperature and salinity are related to density is how water is structured

Temperature effects:

on the Earth, ocean, water covering almost entire Earth

Salinity effects: - the difference in weight between the water and the atmosphere

Pressure effects: - water with higher density is going down

Water density effects: - air pressure is determined by weight of air above it
