

Study Guide: Physical and Chemical Oceanography

Effective composition of ocean water determined by:

- 1) salinity - given defined by mass percentage of water which depends on the amount of water which has evaporated or which has precipitated
- 2) total - water moving through salt balance from evaporation/precipitation and from inflow/outflow of water
- 3) biological processes - phytoplankton consumption of CO₂ and release of O₂ and other gases

Effective salinity and density as a function of:

- 1) temperature - water expands as temperature increases
- 2) composition - water expands as composition changes

How temperature and salinity produce density water relative to surface water:

Temperature differences alone cause density:

- 1) warm water is less dense than cold water
- 2) warm, less dense water is floating on a colder, denser water mass
- 3) when the temperature difference is small, the density difference is affected by the salinity

Salinity differences cause density:

- 1) water with higher salinity is denser than water with lower salinity
- 2) water with higher salinity, and lower temperature, floats above water with higher salinity
- 3) density is greater for water with higher salinity and lower temperature
- 4) the higher the salinity, the greater the density difference as the temperature increases

Notes:

How temperature and salinity affect density is important to us because it is how water...

Temperature effects:

on the Earth's surface, water covering almost 70% of the Earth...

Salinity effects: in the oceans, the density difference is caused by the difference in salinity...

Temperature and salinity effects: in the oceans, the density difference is caused by the difference in temperature and salinity...

Salinity effects: in the oceans, the density difference is caused by the difference in salinity...
