Lesson 7.1 The National Judiciary

Key Terms

Article III of the U.S. Constitution vests the judicial power in the federal judiciary. This includes the Supreme Court and the lower federal courts. The federal judiciary is the branch of government responsible for interpreting the law and ensuring that the government operates within the limits of the Constitution.

Supreme Court is the highest court in the United States. It has the final say on all federal appeals and has the power to declare laws unconstitutional. The Court is composed of nine Justices, including the Chief Justice and eight Associate Justices.

Lower Federal Courts include the Circuit Courts of Appeals and the District Courts. These courts handle most federal cases, including appeals from state courts and federal agencies.

State Courts are the primary courts for most cases in the United States. They handle cases involving state law and state constitutions.

Local Courts are the lowest level of the court system. They handle cases involving local law and local government.

Justices are the members of the federal judiciary who hear cases and make decisions.

Attorneys are legal professionals who represent clients in court and provide legal advice.

Prothonotary is a court officer who handles the filing of legal documents.

Recorder is a court officer who maintains the court records.

Marshal is a court officer who is responsible for the execution of court orders.

Deputy Marshal is a court officer who assists the Marshal in executing court orders.

Chief of Court is the head of the court system. They are responsible for the overall management and administration of the courts. They also oversee the judicial branch of the government.
