- 2. The bottom of the diagram is the root, represents the common ancestor, all of the organisms in the cladogram.
- 3. Cladistics usually refers to specific characters, or characters. A character is a trait that used to be used to infer common descent of a particular clade and was passed on to all the descendants.

DNA in Classification: All organisms have DNA. Because DNA is so stable across all forms of life, the molecule can be compared to different species. In general, the more shared genetic features two species share, the more closely the species share a common ancestor. Genetic analysis can provide insight into:
