Answer the following questions:

- 1.1 Describe the hydrologic cycle, components, and processes. The hydrologic cycle is a continuous process that moves water around the planet. It is driven by the sun, which provides the energy for evaporation. Water evaporates from the ocean, land, and plants. It then condenses into clouds. When the clouds are full, they release precipitation in the form of rain, snow, or sleet. This water then falls to the ground, where it can infiltrate the soil or run off into bodies of water. The water that infiltrates the soil can be stored in the ground for a long time, or it can be used by plants. The water that runs off into bodies of water can be used for drinking, irrigation, or other purposes. The hydrologic cycle is a complex system that is essential for life on Earth.
- 1.2 Define erosion, and the following erosion parts: runoff, channels, meanders, oxbow lakes, and floodplains. Erosion is the process of wearing away the Earth's surface. It is caused by the movement of water, wind, or ice. Runoff is the water that flows over the land surface. Channels are the paths that water takes as it flows. Meanders are the curves in a river or stream. Oxbow lakes are bodies of water that have been cut off from a river. Floodplains are the areas of land that are flooded by a river when it overflows its banks.
- 1.3 Define drainage basin and divide. What is the significance of the continental divide? A drainage basin is the area of land that drains water into a single body of water. A divide is a ridge or high ground that separates two drainage basins. The continental divide is a major divide that runs across North America, separating the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans.
- 1.4 Define drainage patterns, dendritic, and trellis. Dendritic drainage patterns are characterized by a central trunk stream with smaller tributaries joining it at right angles. Trellis drainage patterns are characterized by a central trunk stream with smaller tributaries joining it at acute angles. Dendritic drainage patterns are common in areas with uniform rock types. Trellis drainage patterns are common in areas with folded rock layers.
- 1.5 Describe how erosion, transportation, and deposition are affecting the Grand Canyon and the Colorado Plateau. The Grand Canyon is a large, deep, and narrow gorge that has been carved by the Colorado River. The Colorado Plateau is a large, flat, and arid region in the southwestern United States. Erosion, transportation, and deposition are all processes that are shaping these landscapes. Erosion is the process of wearing away the Earth's surface. Transportation is the process of moving material from one place to another. Deposition is the process of dropping material in a new location.
- 1.6 Define alluvial fans, braided rivers, and oxbow lakes. Alluvial fans are fans of sediment that accumulate at the base of a mountain. Braided rivers are rivers that have multiple channels that shift and change over time. Oxbow lakes are bodies of water that have been cut off from a river.
- 1.7 Describe how the landscape is affected by erosion, deposition, and weathering. Erosion is the process of wearing away the Earth's surface. Deposition is the process of dropping material in a new location. Weathering is the process of breaking down rocks into smaller pieces. These three processes are all working together to shape the landscape.
- 1.8 Define the different types of sedimentary rocks: clastic, organic, and chemical. Clastic sedimentary rocks are made of fragments of other rocks. Organic sedimentary rocks are made of the remains of plants and animals. Chemical sedimentary rocks are made of minerals that have precipitated out of a solution.
