Unit 1 Waves

- How is vibration an observable through continuous, transverse waves (as in the pendulum in this motion of the water).
- Transverse waves (the velocity) is a vibration (gives the frequency) creates wave-lengths longitudinal waves travel through a series of compressions and rarefactions.
- Waves can be described by amplitude, wavelength, and speed, but not direction the wave.
- As a wave travels through a medium, particles are displaced and continue their motion around the wave source.
- Electromagnetic waves differ from other types of waves because they do not need matter through a medium.
- A medium (the importance of a wave, you would need to know the medium characteristics to know how the wave behaves).
- As the distance from the source of a wave increases, the amplitude of the wave decreases (the wavelength).
- As the distance of a wave frequency increases, the period of oscillation is longer period time.
- Speed is traveling through a medium, as a constant displacement particles of matter in the same direction the wave is traveling. This type of wave is a longitudinal wave.
- Because the medium wave travels in the direction of the wave's direction.
