Walters,1994-09-08 For two decades colleges and universities have regularly offered and in some cases required courses in thinking skills Such courses generally have focused on training students in the basics of informal and formal logic the assumption being that good thinking is logical thinking and that instruction in critical or good thinking consequently should emphasize logical procedures This logistic assumption is clearly reflected in both critical thinking textbooks as well as in the professional literature Recently however the epistemic and pedagogical identification of critical thinking and logical thinking has been questioned by educators from a wide diversity of disciplines Many of these critics argue that a richer more comprehensive model of thinking itself is needed one that acknowledges the importance of traditionally downplayed faculties such as empathy imagination and insight Others contend that thinking skills theory and pedagogy must take into consideration the contextual and sometimes political influences upon not just content but also styles of thinking finally still other critics of the conventional model of critical thinking argue that recent research in feminist studies sheds a great deal of light upon the directions in which critical thinking instruction should go The fourteen essays in this anthology all illustrate this new way of thinking about critical thinking Each of them is critical of the received model and each of them argues for one that goes beyond the conventional reduction of thinking skills to logical expertise But each approaches the issue from a different angle thereby providing the reader with a diversity of perspectives and accents Re Thinking Reason is an invaluable resource tool research guide and supplemental textbook for educators across the disciplines who are concerned with incorporating thinking skills instruction in their classes Aging, Representation, and Thought Matthew J.

Sharps,2011-11-30 The brain contains many distinct functional and anatomical regions Despite these differences brain tissues are sufficiently uniform in the fact that they can engage in various types of processing How can functionally different kinds of processes such as verbal memory and reasoning visual and auditory memory and mental imagery all be supported by the relatively uniform electrochemical activity of a brain s neurons How are they appropriately segregated and integrated as needed In Aging Representation and Thought Matthew J Sharps provides an empirically based functional answer to what is from the standpoint of modern cognitive psychology a critical theoretical issue Sharps argues that the crucial factor is the degree to which information is subjected to processing that is more gestalt or feature intensive in nature Sharps shows that purely gestalt processing deals with information in large chunks providing for relatively little incisive analysis Purely feature intensive processing on the other hand tends to ignore the overall nature and context of information in favor of comparatively minute analyses. It provides for relatively comprehensive analysis but also for slow cumbersome processing. Neither process however works in isolation and Sharps demonstrates how information processing occurs on a continuum between the two extremes. Sharps theoretical perspective is amply borne out by the results of specific experiments in all of the cognitive realms he addresses. He provides relatively comprehensive explanations for a variety of phenomena including the diminution of specific cognitive processes with age and errors in eyewitness memory reasoning and decision making at all levels of human activity. Aging Representation and Thought will be of interest to psychologists students of adult development and aging and management specialists.
