

Strongly recommend that you prepare the following questions in advance

Statistical inference about a population comes in two different forms. It either begins with a specific research question (or several questions) about a population (and then attempts to find the answer using population or sample data). There is also a form of inference that begins with a population of study (e.g., all students at a university) and then attempts to answer questions about the behavior of the sample populations regarding themselves. This latter form of inference is called inferential statistics.

Exercise 1: Population and Sample Populations and Subpopulations

1. Answer as asked to:

a. Which box shows the largest population?

Individuals (circles)

b. Which box shows the largest sample?

The size of the Population

2. Describe the size of a single random sample from each box.
