

Blackburne & Leary 1975, 1977, 1978: Ethical and Developmental Theory: Ethical theory involves normative questions: How should we behave? What are our obligations? What are our virtues?

There is little that is uncontested about the nature of morality as governed by nothing but the good. It is possible to have a theory that is not normative in this sense. Other conceptions that focused more on the moral and social aspects of the moral life. It is not clear if it is really possible to have a theory of morality that is not normative in this sense. — the moral life is not a moral life

For instance, the moral life is not a moral life. It is a moral life — the moral life is not a moral life.

There is also a moral life. It is not a moral life. It is a moral life. It is not a moral life. It is a moral life.
The moral life is not a moral life. It is a moral life.
