Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and heart rate reserve (HRR) of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were 15 men, 40 to 50 years old, who had been sedentary for at least 1 year. They were randomly assigned to a 12-week training program or a control group. The training program consisted of three sessions per week of aerobic exercise at 70% of the maximum HR. The control group did not exercise. The HR and HRR were measured at rest and during maximal exercise at the beginning and at the end of the 12-week period. The results showed that the training program significantly increased the HR and HRR at rest and during maximal exercise. The control group showed no significant changes. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness of sedentary middle-aged men.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial light or other light sources. To avoid this, there are two things the producer should do:
 - Turn off the lights at the end of the day.
 - Use red light for night time. Red light has the least effect on the circadian clock.
- The end of the light period is important. The way the light is turned off is critical. The producer should be practicing a gradual dimming of the lights. The lights should be dimmed over a 15-minute period. The lights should be dimmed over the 15 minutes before the end of the light period.
