Business and Enterprise Committee, 2008 This report examines the matter of accountability to the House of Commons of Lord Mandelson of Foy and Hartlepool the Secretary of State for Business Enterprise and Regulatory Reform As a member of the House of Lords he is unable to answer questions in the House of Commons The report compares the current situation with previous examples of Cabinet ministers being in the House of Lords The Committee notes that the current situation differs from the past in that a significant proportion of the ministerial support team is based in the Lords or shared with other departments It is unfortunate that the department for business is so thinly represented in the Commons One solution would be to amend Standing Orders to allow Lord Mandelson to appear at the Despatch Box to answer questions in the Commons There are precedents for this approach Such a change might though encourage governments to appoint more members of the House of Lords as department heads and the Committee feels that would be an unwelcome and significant constitutional change The Procedure Committee should investigate a mechanism for parliamentary questions to the Secretary of State for Business Enterprise and Regulatory Reform
