

The Child Poverty

7 pages | 1749 words

1.2 Poverty This can result from low income, unemployment, parental separation, illness or disability, addictions, or criminal activities. Children may suffer malnutrition or a poor diet as a result of their parents being unable to afford quality food. This could result in lack of concentration or poor performance at school. They could also suffer other health related issues. They may be the subject of bullying as a result of their clothing or because they do not have the latest 'must have' accessories. They will probably miss out on further education due to the costs involved, or as a result of the need to find employment to help support the family.

- Poor housing One of the side effects of poverty is poor housing. People on low income are often dependent on local authority housing. This may result in overcrowding, for example being housed in a bedsit or home with insufficient bedrooms. This means the child has no privacy, or personal space. They may struggle with homework and course work because of the lack of a quiet space in which to complete it. The housing provided may be of a poor quality – suffering damp or be in disrepair. This could have a detrimental effect on the child's health – causing asthma or frequent colds and coughs. It will probably be in a less desirable area or could be in an area with social disorder problems. This may result in the children becoming isolated, as their parents may be fearful of letting them out to play or they may themselves become involved in anti-social behaviour and criminal activities.

1.3 To protect children from significant harm and improve children's social care (by, for example, tackling domestic violence, poverty and neglect, drug, alcohol and mental health problems in families). • To improve engagement in learning and achievement in educational skills (for example, improving schools attendance, behaviour, curriculum and ethos, improving language, literacy and numeracy, social literacy, employability skills of young people). • To reduce health inequalities (for example, reducing levels of infant mortality, childhood obesity, teenage conception, and improving emotional health).

1.4 Strategic direction from national and local policy is required to ensure every young child gets the early intervention that they need and enable change. 3.8 million children are currently living in poverty in the UK, one area in particular that is affected by this is education. By the time they start school, many poor children are already lagging behind, this can continue throughout their whole education.

The Child Poverty Action Group states:

- children from poorer backgrounds lag at all stages of education • by the age of three, poorer children are estimated to be, on average, nine months behind children from more wealthy backgrounds • by the end of primary school, pupils receiving free school meals are estimated to be almost three terms behind their peers • by 14, this gap grows to over five terms

- by 16, children receiving free school meals achieve 1.7 grades lower at GCSE
