I. Policy

It is the policy of the University of Colorado at Boulder that unwanted pests will be managed by all persons (faculty, students, staff and applicators) utilizing the following Integrated Pest Management (IPM) procedures.

II. Definitions

Integrated Pest Management (IPM)—IPM is an effective and environmentally sensitive approach to pest management that relies on a combination of commonsense practices. IPM programs use current, comprehensive information on the life cycles of pests and their interactions with the environment. This information, in combination with available pest control methods, is used to manage pest damage by the most economical means, and with the least possible hazard to people, property, and the environment. IPM programs take advantage of all pest management options possibly including, but not limited to, the judicious use of pesticides.

Pests—For purposes of this policy, Pests are populations of living organisms (animals, plants, or microorganisms) that cause damage or interfere with the use of UCB facilities and grounds for human purposes. Strategies for managing pest populations will be influenced by the pest species and whether that species poses a threat to people, property, or the environment.

Pest Thresholds—Pest tolerance thresholds must be established and may vary by pest, specific location or type of land use. Each department having facility and land use responsibility will establish the pest threshold levels for their area of responsibility. Three distinct levels should be determined:

- Injury Threshold, at the point some injury begins or is noticed initially
- Action Threshold, requires that action be taken to prevent a pest population from causing aesthetic, functional or economic damages
- Damage Threshold, the level where unacceptable damages are already occurring.

Regular monitoring is essential to determine the pest levels relative to the established thresholds.
