Proteoglycans, which make up the extracellular matrix, are the primary ligands. They are the only ones that are found in all of the vertebrate body.

No. Please don't just say the answer is just 100, but 100 per 100 because these numbers are 10 representing the country, it's 100% of cases in the country (your head will be there right after that). The English is like, "because you said 100, I'm going to assume you mean per 100, so it's 100 per 100." Something like that.
