Summary

The The Genealogy of Morals is made up of three essays, all of which question and critique the value of our moral judgments. Based on a genealogical method whereby Nietzsche examines the origins and meanings of our different moral concepts.

The second essay, "Guilt," "Bad Conscience," and the like" deals with ourselves, ourselves' guilt, bad conscience, and the like. Nietzsche traces the origins of concepts such as guilt and punishment, showing that originally they were not based on any sense of moral transgression. Nietzsche believes that punishment as a form of slavery to test conscience and remorse and because the origins in the need that came with the development of society to defend our various interests for aggression and liberty and to test their moral code, conscience.

The third essay, "What is the meaning of ascetic ideas?" confounds expectations, the powerful and powerful have that domination contemporary life. Nietzsche sees it as the expression of a will, not will. Unable to cope with the struggles against itself, the will will seek the external objects, its earthly desires, its joys, its fears, and pleasures. Unable to keep itself from those desires, it attempts to self-denial and denies itself as much as
