

How to use this Study Guide

This study guide is divided into four weeks. Each week is comprised of Homework (to be done before class) and Classroom Discussion. The Homework will always consist of vocabulary, the reading assignment, parent discussion questions, and comprehension questions. There may also be additional assignments such as chart work or projects. It is recommended for students to review the Classroom Discussion prior to coming to class so that they are prepared to participate in discussion. It is not necessary for them to know every answer to these questions, but simply to be thinking about them ahead of time. Charts are generally located in the back of the study guide. These are filled in throughout the weeks and turned in at the completion of the study guide. All other Homework is turned in weekly. Please pay attention to directions for vocabulary and assignments each week, as they may not always be the same.

Week One begins with the Homework assignments. If you are introducing this guide in a classroom, it is recommended that you read through the cover information about the book and author (Note that the Book Background may contain spoilers), go over how to use this guide, and familiarize the class with any charts or maps and Week One's assignments.

is nothing in the world which endures." Thus, in a world of flux, the only constant is the flux itself. This principle is borrowed from the famous pre-Socratic philosopher Heraclitus. The cries of Solomon in Ecclesiastes and Heraclitus are echoed by Ovid, who recognizes that nothing is as it seems, and nothing remains the same forever. All is prone to decay and destruction. Ovid, however, is not a dark writer with a skeptical view of human life. While Virgil writes with an air of gravitas, which means heaviness and seriousness, Ovid writes with a light hearted, spirited tone. As C. S. Lewis says, "cheery old Ovid" neither ignores a molehill nor makes a mountain out of anything.

Virgil dolefully asks why there is such anger in the breasts of the gods; Ovid jovially pokes fun at the gods for getting angry over the ridiculous game of love. The whole Metamorphoses is rife with irony. Although Ovid says that nothing endures except change, even this maxim is tongue-in-cheek. Ovid himself strives for everlasting immortality through the creation of The Metamorphoses. For Ovid, art is the way to immortal life and fame. The very last word of the poem is vivam, which means: I shall live. Art grants immortal life to the artist who creates it.

About the Author

Publius Ovidius Naso was born in Sulmo, Italy, on the Ides of March in 43 BC, exactly one year after the death of Julius Caesar. Ovid was born into the equestrian class, and his father took Ovid and his brother to Rome to receive a proper education in rhetoric and government. After trying his hand at serving the state, Ovid became disgusted with the political games and decided to pursue what he really loved: women and poetry. Ovid became the most famous lyric poet of his day, and was read alongside Horace and Virgil. Ovid is considered to be one of the greatest Augustan poets and is still read widely today.
