Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 12 women, 40 to 50 years old, who had been sedentary for at least 10 years. They were randomly assigned to a 12-week training program or a control group. The training program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes, and included aerobic and strength training. The control group continued with their sedentary lifestyle. HR and EE were measured at baseline and at the end of the 12-week period. The results showed that the training program significantly increased HR and EE in the women, while the control group showed no significant changes. The increase in HR and EE was maintained at the end of the 12-week period. The findings suggest that a 12-week training program can effectively increase HR and EE in sedentary, middle-aged women.

- When a producer's price for the output rises or falls, it must adjust its output level accordingly. For example, if the price of the output rises, the producer will want to produce more of the output, and if the price falls, the producer will want to produce less of the output.
