Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were randomly assigned to a control group (CON) and an exercise group (EX). The EX group performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week of aerobic and resistance training. The CON group remained sedentary. The EX group showed a significant decrease in HR and an increase in EE compared to the CON group. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve cardiovascular fitness and increase energy expenditure in sedentary, middle-aged women.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial light or other light sources. To avoid this, there are two things the producer should do:
 - 1. Use natural light sources, if possible, and
 - 2. If artificial light is required, use light that is as close to natural light as possible.
- The end of the day is the time when the light intensity drops to a level that is not sufficient to sustain the growth of the algae. This is the time when the producer should harvest the algae. If the producer does not harvest the algae at this time, the algae will continue to grow and the light intensity will drop to a level that is not sufficient to sustain the growth of the algae. This will result in a lower yield of algae.

- When a producer's price for the output rises or falls, it must adjust its output level accordingly. For example, suppose the price for the product rises. The producer will want to produce more of the product, so it will increase its output level.
