

Optics - The Study of Light

Refraction

Light refracts when passing between two substances at an angle.

Light does not bend as glass that is not yet within water. Bending begins at boundary between air and water.

Light travels faster in water than in air, so it bends, compressing the light as it enters the water.

The refractive index (n) is a measure of how much the speed of light is reduced inside a medium.

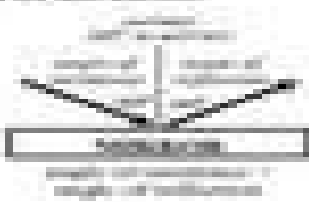

Reflection

Light reflects off a surface. Angle of incidence equals angle of reflection.

Normal - an imaginary line 90° perpendicular to a surface.

Angle of Incidence - the angle between the incident ray and the normal.

Angle of Reflection - the angle between the reflected ray and the normal.

Focus

Point at which all incident light rays converge after reflection from a curved surface. Focus is the focal point of a lens.

Concave Mirrors

Concave mirrors focus light rays that are parallel to the principal axis. They have a focal point in front of the mirror.

Convex Mirrors

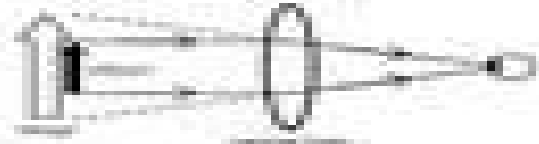

The surface is curved out, away from the light source. They have a focal point behind the mirror.

The image is virtual, upright, and smaller than the object.

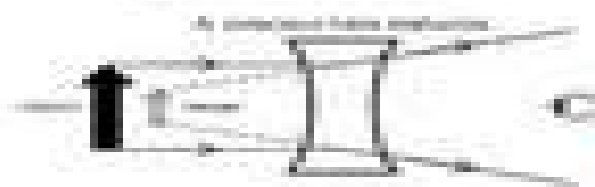

Lenses

Lenses work by refraction, bending light rays that pass through them. They have a focal point.

A convex lens converges light.

A concave lens diverges light.

A concave lens is divergent. The light rays spread apart.

Image is virtual and upright.

Concave and convex lenses converge or diverge light. If a converging lens is thicker in the center, it is a converging lens.

Concave Lenses

Optical Systems

Microscopes and telescopes use multiple lenses to magnify objects. They use converging and diverging lenses to focus light.

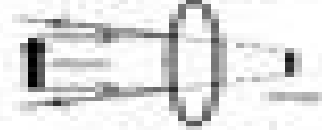

Optical systems are used in many applications, from cameras to medical imaging.

Images

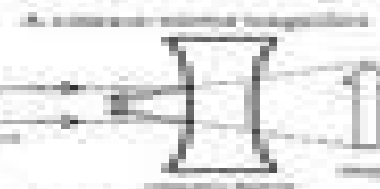

Images are formed by light rays. They can be real or virtual, upright or inverted, and magnified or reduced.

For a real image, the light rays actually converge at a point. For a virtual image, the light rays only appear to converge.

A convex lens can form a real image.

A convex lens can form a virtual image.

A concave lens always forms a virtual image.
