Study Guide for Exam 1

Developmental Psychology: the discipline that studies the physical, cognitive, social, and emotional development of humans.

Developmental stages:

1. Developmental periods: broadest of life course, identifying major physical and psychological systems and structures that develop during infancy, childhood, adolescence, and adulthood, each marked by key developmental tasks and
2. Child stages: 1st period of growth and development, characterized by rapid physical growth, maturation of motor systems, focused on developing basic competencies and social relationships, and the formation of personality. It is divided into infancy, childhood, and adolescence, each with its own unique developmental tasks and challenges.
3. Adolescence: the period of life when the body is growing and differentiating, and when the mind is developing. It is marked by rapid physical growth, maturation of motor systems, and the formation of personality. It is divided into childhood, adolescence, and adulthood, each with its own unique developmental tasks and challenges.
4. Adulthood: the period of life when the body is growing and differentiating, and when the mind is developing. It is marked by rapid physical growth, maturation of motor systems, and the formation of personality. It is divided into childhood, adolescence, and adulthood, each with its own unique developmental tasks and challenges.
5. Developmental tasks: specific goals and challenges that must be met for healthy development. These tasks are organized into four domains: physical, cognitive, social, and emotional.

Developmental research:

1. Longitudinal research: studies that follow the same group of people over time, allowing researchers to track changes in behavior, cognition, and emotion over time. This method is used to study the development of personality, intelligence, and social relationships.
2. Experimental research: studies that manipulate one or more variables to see if they cause changes in behavior, cognition, and emotion. This method is used to study the development of personality, intelligence, and social relationships.
3. Correlational research: studies that look for relationships between variables without manipulating them. This method is used to study the development of personality, intelligence, and social relationships.
4. Developmental research: studies that look for changes in behavior, cognition, and emotion over time. This method is used to study the development of personality, intelligence, and social relationships.
