Marshall's correspondence is a richly detailed personal and public diary. The correspondence was important to him, as he wrote his close relations at home, and as confidantes, friends, students and invited guests, often on numerous occasions, letters accompanied his foreign travels. His extensive correspondence was also known to the Soviet Union, who have been keen to exploit the Marshall's correspondence as well as to support the propaganda, with their emphasis on Marshall's personal involvement in the anti-fascist movement, including, notably, preparation of the Marshall document, following the capture of Rome, and preparation of a statement with Benito Mussolini for the future trial of captured and executed fascists. The fact, as we have seen, that Marshall believed that there were fascists (and that they were still dangerous) has already been noted. The greater part of the correspondence, however, is devoted to the Marshall's activities in the post-war world.

The following are the main results of the study:
