comprehensive account of the processes involved in remembering and forgetting The reader will find bold new treatments of repression and childhood amnesia systematic explorations of certain experimental amnesias and challenging analyses of the anomalies of everyday memory in this ground breaking work of the time Working Memory and Human Cognition John T. E. Richardson, Randall W. Engle, Lynn Hasher, Robert H. Logie, Ellen R. Stoltzfus, Rose T. Zacks, 1996-05-16 This new volume in the Counterpoints series compares and contrasts different conceptions of working memory generally recognized as the human cognitive system responsible for temporary storage of information The book includes proponents of several different views Robert Logie discusses the theoretical and empirical utility of separating working memory into an articulatory loop a phonological store and a visuo spatial sketchpad into visual and spatial subsystems Patricia Carpenter provides evidence for a process view of working memory arguing that both task specific processing and general processing capabilities can account for the full range of working memory phenomena She focuses on findings from reading comprehension and memory tasks suggesting that working memory is used to represent the set of skills and strategies necessary for complex tasks while retaining residual capacity for use as a storage buffer Lynn Hasher argues in favor of the new inhibitory model with evidence drawn from the literature on aging and pathology that demonstrates parallels between memory disorders and normal memory functioning Randall Engle addresses the issue of whether working memory resources are required for retrieval of information or whether that task is relatively automatic Engle s empirical studies in turn bear directly on the positions of Carpenter Hasher and Logie As interest in working memory is increasing at a rapid pace an open discussion of the central issues involved is both useful and timely This work serves this purpose for a wide audience of cognitive psychologists and their students Basic and Applied Memory Research Douglas J. Human Associative Memory John R. Anderson, G. H. Bower, 2013-05-13 Published in 1980 part of the Experimental Psychology series This book proposes and tests a theory about human memory about how a person encodes retains and retrieves information from memory This edition contains two major parts First is the historical analysis of associationism and its countertraditions This still provides the framework that has been used to relate the current research to an important intellectual tradition This is reproduced without comment from the original book historical analyses do not need as rapid revision as theoretical analyses The second part of the book reproduces the major components of the HAM theory

Human Associative Memory John Robert Anderson, Gordon H. Bower, 1980 This brief edition contains two major parts The first is the historical analysis of associationism and its countertraditions which still provides the framework used to relate current research to an important intellectual tradition The second part of the book reproduces the major components of the HAM theory In our view the major contribution of that theory was the propositional network analyses of memory and the placement of those representational assumptions into an information processing framework This book is smaller than the previous book on HAM thanks to a re evaluation of certain sections which have been deleted some due to out of date information some because the analyses presented have been replaced by better ones This book makes the more important points of the original HAM book available at a more economical price from the preface
