Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 6-week training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life (HRQL) of sedentary middle-aged women. Thirty-two women were randomly assigned to either a control group or an exercise group. The exercise group performed a supervised aerobic and resistance training program three times per week for 6 weeks. The control group did not participate in any structured exercise program. Pre- and post-training measurements included body composition, cardiorespiratory fitness, muscle strength, and HRQL. Results showed that the exercise group had significant improvements in all measured variables compared to the control group. These findings suggest that a 6-week supervised exercise program can improve physical fitness and HRQL in sedentary middle-aged women.
