

1. Introduction
 The purpose of this study is to investigate the effects of a new teaching method on student performance. The study was conducted over a period of six months, during which time the new method was implemented in a classroom setting. The results of the study are presented in the following sections.

2. Methodology
 The study was conducted using a quasi-experimental design. The participants were a group of 30 students, who were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The control group was taught using the traditional method, while the experimental group was taught using the new method. The data was collected through a series of tests and quizzes, and the results were analyzed using statistical methods.

3. Results
 The results of the study show that the new teaching method had a significant positive effect on student performance. The experimental group scored significantly higher than the control group on all tests and quizzes. The results are summarized in the following table:

Test/Quiz	Control Group	Experimental Group
Test 1	75%	85%
Test 2	70%	80%
Test 3	72%	82%
Quiz 1	78%	88%
Quiz 2	74%	84%
Quiz 3	76%	86%

4. Conclusion
 The study concludes that the new teaching method is more effective than the traditional method. The results of the study suggest that the new method should be implemented in other classrooms to improve student performance. The study also highlights the importance of using a quasi-experimental design to evaluate the effectiveness of new teaching methods.
