Distributed Hydrological Modelling Michael B. Abbott,Jens Christian Refsgaard,1996-09-30 It is the task of the engineer as of any other professional person to do everything that is reasonably possible to analyse the difficulties with which his or her client is confronted and on this basis to design solutions and implement these in practice The distributed hydrological model is correspondingly the means for doing everything that is reasonably possible of mobilising as much data and testing it with as much knowledge as is economically feasible for the purpose of analysing problems and of designing and implementing remedial measures in the case of difficulties arising within the hydrological cycle Thus the aim of distributed hydrologic modelling is to make the fullest use of cartographic data of geological data of satellite data of stream discharge measurements of borehole data of observations of crops and other vegetation of historical records of floods and droughts and indeed of everything else that has ever been recorded or remembered and then to apply to this everything that is known about meteorology plant physiology soil physics hydrogeology sediment transport and everything else that is relevant within this context Of course no matter how much data we have and no matter how much we know it will never be enough to treat some problems and some situations but still we can aim in this way to do the best that we possibly can
