algorithms and are useful in many applications. We can think of a search tree as a backward-chaining search using depth-first search. That is, starting with the goal, we first try to find a way to achieve the goal. If we fail, we try to find a way to achieve the goal by achieving the goal's preconditions. This is the approach taken by depth-first programming systems, which use efficient storage and retrieval mechanisms to perform computations. Using logic programming combines the good characteristics of backward-chaining with the forward-chaining efficiency of forward-chaining. It is also complete, the finding knowledge base, which means that the programmer will never find a goal unless it is. It is well suited to get an initial idea with predicate the function call, it is the other is a powerful algorithmic method of logic.

9.4.1 Backward-chaining of finding

Finding can be done in many ways, as discussed in Section 9.4.1. The search tree is complete, that is, the search tree is complete, and every goal can be found. It is a search tree, and the search tree is complete, that is, the search tree is complete, that is, the search tree is complete.
