Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and heart rate reserve (HRR) of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were 15 men, 40 to 50 years old, who had been sedentary for at least 10 years. They were randomly assigned to a 10-week training program or a control group. The training program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes, at a heart rate of 150 beats per minute. The control group did not exercise. The HR and HRR were measured at rest and during a maximal exercise test at the beginning and at the end of the 10-week period. The results showed that the training program significantly increased the HR and HRR of the subjects. The HR at rest increased from 68 to 72 beats per minute, and the HRR increased from 22 to 26 beats per minute. The HR and HRR during the maximal exercise test also increased, from 178 to 182 beats per minute and from 110 to 114 beats per minute, respectively. The results suggest that a 10-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness of sedentary middle-aged men.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial light or other light-emitting devices. To avoid this, there are two things the patient should do:
 - Avoid exposure to bright light at night
 - Avoid exposure to bright light during the day
- The end of the day is a good time to go to bed, and the beginning of the day is a good time to get up. The patient should try to go to bed and get up at the same time every day. The patient should also try to go to bed and get up at the same time every day.
- The patient should also try to go to bed and get up at the same time every day.

Writers go on about the "American dream" and praise the idea of the family as the basis for all other values. But it's not always clear what the authors are really getting at. Is the family the source of all good things, or is it just a place where people can find comfort and support?
