- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial light or natural light at night. To reduce the risk of circadian rhythm disruption, it is recommended that people avoid artificial light at night.
- Artificial sources of light can also contribute to the risk of sleep disruption. For example, the length of the exposure may vary depending on the use of indoor lighting.
- The use of artificial light at night may also increase the risk of cancer. The possible link between artificial light at night and cancer has been studied in several studies. Some studies have found that the use of artificial light at night is associated with an increased risk of cancer.
