Relationship Marketing for Healthcare Professionals Kelley S. Pendleton DC & MPH, 2014-09-15 Whether you're a chiropractor medical doctor massage therapist veterinarian acupuncturist or any other provider of a healing art you've undergone intensive training and developed valuable skills. However, traditional healthcare curricula may not address the critical areas of business finance and marketing. Proficiency in these skills, especially marketing, can help your practice succeed and allow you to genuinely connect with your communities.

Written by a healthcare professional for healthcare professionals, Community Connections is the first in a series of books designed to bridge the gap between what you're taught in school and how to market a practice in the real world. Using this collection of easy and affordable marketing ideas, any independent healthcare provider can forge a strong and genuine connection with potential clients regardless of any previous marketing experience. This guide is all about building the unique relationship between a healthcare provider and the local community while respecting the specific professional and legal issues inherent in that relationship. Whether you're a veteran in the healthcare industry or just getting started, Community Connections contains the valuable advice and practical marketing ideas you need from the reasons most healthcare practices don't market to gaining a deeper understanding of yourself and your community at large. Discover how implementing easy and affordable marketing activities can expand the success of your healthcare practice.

Operating Grants for Nonprofit Organizations 2005 Grants Program, 2005-04-30. Few needs are more important to a nonprofit organization than funding for operating costs. In this new directory, nonprofits and other organizations seeking grants and funding opportunities to support general operating expenses will find over 1,300 current operating grants organized by state with contact and requirement information for each. Three user-friendly indexes: subject, sponsor, and geographic restriction help grantseekers quickly find the ideal funding opportunity.

Community Computing Toru Ishida, 1998-11-30. Community Computing Collaboration Over Global Information Networks. Edited by Toru Ishida, Kyoto University, Japan. With the success of network software suites, groupware has rapidly acquired a high level of commercial interest. Drawing together the various origins of this technology from distributed computing, communication networks, autonomous agents, and multi-agent systems, this book opens an important new avenue of research into global collaboration systems for a wide variety of people. It also makes an interesting case study of human-computer interaction and the role of technologies in virtual communities. This book extends groupware for human communities. Conventional groupware typically supports the cooperative work of formally organized groups of people. The collaboration technologies introduced in this book, unlike conventional groupware, are designed to support the process of organizing people who are willing to share mutual understanding and experiences. Community Computing draws on the combined experience of leading industrial and academic researchers to present the following five stages of social interaction in human communities: Knowing each other by groundbreaking implementation of virtual spaces; Sharing preference and knowledge by distributed computing over the Internet; Generating consensus by network solutions for
