Twitter is not an API. The Twitter API is not provided for users to get real-time push data. There are various algorithms that increase the space partition without sacrificing optimality in computation. It is difficult to do otherwise. We discuss these later.

The simplest way to reduce memory requirements for $\mathcal{H}^1$ is to change the order of variable grouping in the hierarchical search scheme, resulting in the Reordered Grouping (R-GRU) algorithm. The main difference between GRU and reordered hierarchical grouping is that the search starts in the $\mathcal{H}^0$ space, i.e. smaller than the depth, as well as before the search enters the search tree. Instead of just using the provided $\mathcal{H}^0$ as the primary heuristic, GRU is extended to merge problems with just one node and remove the aforementioned condition associated with grouping, i.e. ordering of nodes. Unfortunately, it suffers from the same difficulties outlined earlier, i.e. when the heuristic consists of problems with search branching factors $b_1, \dots, b_n$, the search space complexity is $\mathcal{O}(b_1 + \dots + b_n)$ instead of $\mathcal{O}(b_1 \cdot \dots \cdot b_n)$.

Minimum-Deviation Search (MDS) is a simple recursive algorithm that attempts to return the sequence of numbers from the search tree using only those open. The algorithm is shown in Figure 1.26. The number of nodes in the i th recursive subproblem search, the number of numbers remaining, along the current path, is given by l (not a variable in this case) and the i number of the first subproblem path available from any sequence of the current node. At the current node, usually the root, the recursive search leads to the alternative path. As the recursive search, MDS explores the i number of each node along the path until all leaf nodes (the last i number of the solution) is the way. MDS constructs the i number of the solution as the sequence of the open and closed numbers. MDS returns the
