

Prevention of School Violence - Research Paper Example Essay

Introduction

Schools are supposed to be safe spaces for students and the staff. The prevalence of violent act in American high schools, especially mass shootings, spawned several studies and conceptual frameworks which sought to explain this phenomenon as well as potential ways to address the problem(Astor et al 1999; Hill & Drolet,1999). The general consensus became that the term 'school violence' became an umbrella term which encompasses mass shootings, physical fights, cyberbullying, adolescent suicide, dating violence, and sexual harassment. What remained unresolved is what the causes of school violence are. Rooted in the natural law school of thought, some academics attributed the causes of school violence to internal factors that may have pushed a perpetrator of school violence. The opposite view, anchored in the positivist tradition, attributed the causes of school violence to external factors that may have pushed a perpetrator.

In Violence Among Students and School Staff, the author proposes that school violence may be caused by school climate (Brooks,2017). Unlike the traditional arguments on the causes of school violence, Brooks(2017) proposes that the causes of school violence may lay beyond a troubled student. The author proposes that policymakers, administrators, teachers or the community a school belongs to can play a critical role in the existence and prevention of school violence. Employing a quantitative research methodology, this study will seek to establish the extent to which Dr.Brooks (2017) is right.

Purposes of the Study

From the foregoing , the objectives of the study are to : (1) establish what may be the causes of school violence ;(2) to understand the motivation behind aggression which may lead to school violence ; and (3) to propose school violence prevention plans that may mitigate the levels of school violence in American high school.

Justifications for the Study

According to the National School Climate Council (Shukla 2019) defined the term 'school climate' as a set of values which creates expectations that students and staff will be socially, emotionally as well as physically safe within a school(Shukla 2019). Consequently, it is predicated on respect for the people who constitute the members of the school community as well as their participation in decision-making processes. The justification for researching the causes of school violence and possible solutions include the fact that a positive school climate is linked to several positive outcomes for students.

Positive school climates have been shown to be the basis for namely : (1) experiencing less bullying; (2) the academic process having better psychological outcomes for students; (3) higher engagement with the school; and (4) better academic achievement for students. According to Shukla(2019), research into the positive school climate is a common subject of studies into improving school safety
