- As is true for all other forms of light, ultraviolet light is also made up of photons. The only difference between ultraviolet and other forms of light is the frequency of the photons. Ultraviolet photons have a higher frequency than visible light photons. This means that ultraviolet photons have more energy than visible light photons. This is why ultraviolet light can cause sunburns and other skin damage, while visible light cannot. The energy of a photon is directly proportional to its frequency. The higher the frequency, the more energy the photon has. This is why ultraviolet light is more harmful than visible light. It has more energy and can cause more damage to the skin. The same is true for other forms of electromagnetic radiation. Gamma rays have the highest frequency and the most energy, while radio waves have the lowest frequency and the least energy. The frequency of the radiation determines its energy and its potential to cause damage to living tissue.
