During childhood, people in the United Kingdom, like those in most other countries, are not as likely to be vaccinated as people in the United States. In the United Kingdom, the vaccination schedule for children is based on the National Immunisation Schedule, which was developed in 1968. The schedule was revised in 1996, and again in 2000. The 2000 schedule was revised to reflect the results of the National Immunisation Survey, which was conducted in 1998. The survey found that the majority of children in the United Kingdom were vaccinated against diphtheria, tetanus, and pertussis (DTP). However, the survey also found that the majority of children were not vaccinated against measles, mumps, and rubella (MMR). This led to a significant increase in the number of children who were not vaccinated against MMR, which in turn led to a significant increase in the number of children who were infected with MMR. This led to a significant increase in the number of children who were infected with MMR, which in turn led to a significant increase in the number of children who were infected with MMR.

The most important findings were consistent for the 1990 and 1991 periods. Following a period of fluctuation in the number of cases in the United States, there was a steady increase in the number of cases reported, with the 1991 peak of 1,173 cases, though not statistically significant. This consistency across both years
