Marshall's organization is a nationally prominent nonprofit think-tank. The organization was founded in 1950, under the name National Defense Education Act Commission, to coordinate and control foreign-scholarship programs aimed at increasing the number of students from the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe. After receiving the U.S. State Department's approval in the Spring of 1950, they have since moved out of Washington, D.C. and are now in the largest city in the country, New York. The organization has been in the forefront of the promotion, and then expansion, of international scientific cooperation. As they continue their international scientific, professional and educational activities, strengthening the cooperation among their government colleagues with their own colleagues in the United States is important and essential to the future of the United States. The growth of the organization is necessary to maintain and expand its research, training, and public relations activities, and to ensure that the United States remains a leader in the world. The growth of the organization is necessary to maintain and expand its research, training, and public relations activities, and to ensure that the United States remains a leader in the world.

Household expenditures show the burden generally fell the hardest on the poor. The poorest households in the country spent 10 percent more on food, clothing, and shelter than the average. Budget cuts in poor households that cut the most were in education, health, and other services that governments are trying to improve. The poorest households in the poorest nations are often the most vulnerable to economic shocks and crises. The poor are often the most vulnerable to economic shocks and crises.

Multi-Sector Engagement Initiatives is currently only implemented in countries where there is a significant number of stakeholders. It is used for projects that need the efforts of companies, university students, the general public, etc. Encouraging and motivating to the general public, encouraging others to participate in the work of projects, and the organization's mission, and the social and economic impact together, which is achieved over different activities, such as: training, information and advice about projects, etc. which the project can use. The organization uses the following strategies and actions:
