Answer the following questions:

- 1.1 Describe the hydrologic cycle, components, and processes. The hydrologic cycle is a continuous cycle of water on Earth. It involves the movement of water between the atmosphere, land, and oceans. The cycle is driven by the sun's energy, which causes water to evaporate from the surface of the ocean and land. The water vapor then condenses into clouds, which release precipitation in the form of rain or snow. The precipitation then flows into bodies of water, such as rivers, lakes, and oceans, or infiltrates the ground to become groundwater. The water eventually returns to the atmosphere through evaporation or transpiration from plants.
- 1.2 Define erosion, and the following erosion parts: runoff, channel, meandering, deposition, and floodplain. Erosion is the process of wearing away the Earth's surface by wind, water, or ice. Runoff is the flow of water over the land surface. A channel is a depression in the land through which water flows. Meandering is the process of a river or stream changing its course. Deposition is the process of sediment being laid down. A floodplain is a flat area of land adjacent to a river or stream that is subject to flooding.
- 1.3 Define drainage basin and divide. A drainage basin is the area of land that drains water into a single body of water. A divide is a ridge or high ground that separates two drainage basins.
- 1.4 Define drainage patterns: dendritic and trellis. Dendritic drainage patterns are characterized by a main channel with smaller tributaries joining it at right angles. Trellis drainage patterns are characterized by a main channel with tributaries joining it at right angles, but the tributaries are more closely spaced than in dendritic patterns.
- 1.5 Describe how erosion, transportation, and deposition are affected by grain size and velocity. Erosion is the process of wearing away the Earth's surface. Transportation is the process of moving sediment from one place to another. Deposition is the process of sediment being laid down. Grain size and velocity are important factors in determining the rate of erosion, transportation, and deposition.
- 1.6 Define alluvial fans, braided rivers, and oxbow lakes. Alluvial fans are fans of sediment that accumulate at the base of a mountain range. Braided rivers are rivers that consist of multiple channels that shift and change frequently. Oxbow lakes are lakes that are formed when a meandering river changes its course and leaves behind a body of water.
- 1.7 Describe how the Earth's surface is shaped by erosion, deposition, and tectonics. The Earth's surface is shaped by a combination of erosion, deposition, and tectonics. Erosion is the process of wearing away the Earth's surface. Deposition is the process of sediment being laid down. Tectonics is the study of the Earth's crust and the forces that shape it.
