and Mapping in Children's Literature Nina Goga, Bettina Kümmerling-Meibauer, 2017-08-15 Maps and Mapping in Children's Literature is the first comprehensive study that investigates the representation of maps in children's books as well as the impact of mapping on the depiction of landscapes, seascapes and cityscapes in children's literature. The chapters in this volume pursue a comparative approach as they represent a wide spectrum of diverse genres and national children's literatures by examining a wealth of children's books from Canada, Denmark, Germany, Italy, Norway, Russia, the United Kingdom and the USA. The theoretical and methodological approaches range from literary studies, developmental psychology, maps and geography, literacy, ecocriticism, historical contextualization with both new historicist and political historical leanings and intermediality to materialist cartographies, cultural studies, island studies and genre studies. By this, this volume aims at embedding children's literature in a broader field of literary and cultural studies, thus situating children's literature research within a general context of literary theory.

Disconnected William Wresch, 1996 In the Information Age information is power. Who produces all that information, how does it move around, who uses it to what ends and under what constraints? Who gets that power? And what happens to the people who have no access to it? Disconnected begins with a striking vignette of two men. One is the thriving manager of a company selling personal computers and computer services. The other is just one among thousands of starving laborers. He has no way to find the information that might help him find a job; he cannot afford newspapers; rarely sees television; cannot understand the dialect of local radio broadcasts; will probably never touch a computer. These two men happen to live in Windhoek, Namibia, but this is not a story about Africa; it is a story that could be repeated almost anywhere in the world, even next door. With vivid anecdotes and data, William Wresch contrasts the opportunities of the information-rich with the limited prospects of the information-poor. Surveying the range of information—personal, public, organizational, commercial—that has become the currency of exchange in today's world, he shows how each represents a form of power. He analyzes the barriers that keep people information-poor: geography, tyranny, illiteracy, psychological blinders, noise, crime. Technology alone, he demonstrates, is not the answer. Even the technology-rich do not always get access to important information or recognize its value. Wresch spells out the grim consequences of information inequity for individuals and society. Yet he ends with reasons for optimism and stories of people who are working to pull down the impediments to the flow of information.
