Future James D. Kinkade, 1996-03-01 This thesis analyzes potential uses of automatic identification technologies to support Army forces on future battlefields. The thesis emphasizes radio frequency RF tag systems but also presents an overview and comparison of six other automatic identification technologies: bar codes, optical character recognition, magnetic stripe, smart cards, optical cards, and voice recognition. The dynamics shaping the Army of the future, the characteristics of that Army, and the characteristics of the logistics system that will support it are discussed. Given those characteristics, potential logistic uses of automatic identification technologies (AIT) are considered. Recent Army applications are presented, and the results and lessons learned are evaluated. The thesis concludes that AIT can play a central role in future Army logistics, in particular if effectively coupled with existing Army systems. AIT can provide commanders and logisticians with invaluable knowledge about the location and status of essential materiel and its expected arrival time at the desired location. In the information age, this level of knowledge may make the difference between success or failure on the battlefield.

An Analysis of Automatic Identification Technology Applications in Naval Logistics David M. Watt, 1997 This thesis evaluates potential uses of automatic identification technologies (AIT) in support of Naval logistics. AIT includes a range of technologies and techniques which incorporate the rapid and accurate capture of data and its subsequent processing for cognitive recognition and identification. An introduction to the various AIT system components from the well established bar coding technology to the more versatile radio frequency identification (RFID) technology is presented. Additionally, the underlying fundamentals of Naval logistics principles, functions, and elements are discussed, including how these themes translate into promising potential uses of AIT. Recent Naval AIT applications are featured, and the results and lessons learned are evaluated. In this era of joint operations and use of coalition forces, this work places emphasis on compatibility, interoperability, and the importance of enforcing standardization of AIT symbologies in the commercial and military sectors. The DoD is in the midst of great change and restructuring, especially in the area of logistics. This study provides Naval logistics stakeholders a broad overview of the prevalent MT system component capabilities and limitations. An AIT implementation model is also featured that delineates the various program elements which have significant impact on the efficiency and effectiveness of procured AIT systems. A thorough understanding of the technology and its associated integration issues should enable Naval leadership to make sound AIT acquisitions.
