Fletcher-Flinn, 2015-09-28 Learning to read and to spell are two of the most important cultural skills that must be acquired by children and for that matter anyone learning a second language We are not born with an innate ability to read A reading system of mental representations that enables us to read must be formed in the brain Learning to read in alphabetic orthographies is the acquisition of such a system which links mental representations of visual symbols letters in print words with pre existing phonological sound and semantic comprehension cognitive systems for language Although spelling draws on the same representational knowledge base and is usually correlated with reading the acquisition processes involved are not quite the same Spelling requires the sequential production of letters in words and at beginning levels there may not be a full degree of integration of phonology with its representation by the orthography Reading on the other hand requires only the recognition of a word for pronunciation Hence spelling is more difficult than reading and learning to spell may necessitate more complete representations or more conscious access to them The learning processes that children use to acquire such cognitive systems in the brain and whether these same processes are universal across different languages and orthographies are central theoretical questions Most children learn to read and spell their language at the same time thus the co ordination of these two facets of literacy acquisition needs explication as well as the effect of different teaching approaches on acquisition Lack of progress in either reading and or spelling is also a major issue of concern for parents and teachers necessitating a cross disciplinary approach to the problem encompassing major efforts from researchers in neuroscience cognitive science experimental psychology and education The purpose of this Research Topic is to summarize and review what has been accomplished so far and to further explore these general issues Contributions from different perspectives are welcomed and could include theoretical computational and empirical works that focus on the acquisition of literacy including cross orthographic research

The Best Class You Never Taught Alexis Wiggins,2017-09-27 The best classes have a life of their own powered by student led conversations that explore texts ideas and essential questions In these classes the teacher s role shifts from star player to observer and coach as the students Think critically Work collaboratively Participate fully Behave ethically Ask and answer high level questions Support their ideas with evidence and Evaluate and assess their own work The Spider Web Discussion is a simple technique that puts this kind of class within every teacher s reach The name comes from the weblike diagram the observer makes to record interactions as students actively participate in the discussion lead and support one another s learning and build community It s proven to work across all subject areas and with all ages and you only need a little know how a rubric and paper and pencil to get started As students practice Spider Web Discussion they become stronger communicators more empathetic teammates better problem solvers and more independent learners college and career ready skills that serve them well in the classroom and beyond Educator Alexis Wiggins provides a step by step guide for the implementation of Spider Web Discussion covering everything from introducing the technique to creating rubrics for discussion self assessment to the nuts and bolts of charting the conversations and using the data collected for formative assessment She also shares troubleshooting tips ideas for assessment and group grading and the experiences of real teachers and students who use the technique to develop and share content knowledge in a way that s both revolutionary and truly inspiring

What Makes a World-Class School and How We Can Get There James H. Stronge,Xianxuan Xu,2017-06-15 For years students in the United States have lagged behind students in many other countries on such measures of achievement as the PISA and TIMSS assessments In an increasingly globalized world such a gap is worrisome Armed with statistics examples and cautionary tales from Scandinavia to Japan James H Stronge and Xianxuan Xu have written a book that can help educators better prepare students and close that gap In What Makes a World Class School and How We Can Get There you will find Careful analysis of recent international assessment results what they mean and what can be done to improve them In depth profiles of high achieving education systems around the globe their histories their lessons learned and what they can teach educators and policymakers in the United States Strategies for aligning successful educational approaches from international systems to U S schools which strategies to use in which subjects and with which students Transformative ideas for cultivating a truly world class system of schooling both simple and complex ways to raise the bar for all students no matter what their background Educators in every country must ensure that their students are as prepared as possible to lead a future generation of citizens This thought provoking and copiously researched book provides educators with a blueprint for radical improvement based on the hard learned experiences of their peers around the world

GUYnecology Rene Almeling, 2020-08-25 For more than a century the medical profession has made enormous efforts to understand and treat women s reproductive bodies But only recently have researchers begun to ask basic questions about how men s health matters for reproductive outcomes from miscarriage to childhood illness What explains this gap in knowledge and what are its consequences Rene Almeling examines the production circulation and reception of biomedical knowledge about men s reproductive health From a failed nineteenth century effort to launch a medical specialty called andrology to the contemporary science of paternal effects there has been a lack of attention to the importance of men s age health and exposures Analyzing historical documents media messages and qualitative interviews GUYnecology demonstrates how this non knowledge shapes reproductive politics today
