Culture is always changing, new ideas, procedures and techniques are added, modified or discarded. People must be prepared and ready to conform to these changes. The changes going on today is very rapid than in the primitive times due to fast advancement of science and development.
- ✓ 4. Culture is cumulative
Certain features of culture have been retained today and they are modified and innovated to make them new and updated. Thus, man's modification and innovation are learned from already existing culture in the past.
- ✓ 5. Culture is idealational
Culture is an ideal pattern of behavior which the members are expected to follow. Thus, the members of society are society from the standpoint of culture.
- ✓ 6. Culture gratifies human needs
Culture continues to exist if it satisfies human needs biologically and psychologically. An individual is likely to follow and observe cultural techniques that satisfy his needs.
- ✓ 7. Culture is social
Culture is a group product developed by many individuals interacting in a group. The habits and knowledge of the members in a group are shared by other members out of the sharing of ideas, culture sprouts.
- ✓ 8. Culture is integration
By integration, it means that there is a tendency for individuals to fully appreciate those elements in culture that are best for them, and these are very often integrated in their personality and become part of their behavior.
- ✓ 9. Culture is not usually known by people
The way people interact and do things in their everyday lives seems "natural" to people. People are unaware of their culture because they are so close to it and know it well. For most people, it is as if their learned behavior was biologically inherited.
