

HOW TO MAKE A PORCHNO

How to Make a Porchno (you will need an air source other than your pump that does not blow in air directed in this way).

1. Load the machine to make a flat graft.
2. Make sure the graft is in the up position.
3. Move the grafts together using a piece of yarn and the plastic needle. Attach the long ends. Move the other short grafts together the same way. This now forms two wide pieces (See diagram A).
4. To connect the two pieces, use the short end of piece 1 in the long end of piece 2 (See diagram B).
5. Move the short end of piece 3 in the long end of piece 1 (See diagram C).
6. Move both your machine to make a tube and both air ways. Remove tube from the machine. Spread both ends leaving them open, not closed. Move the ends together to make a circle. This will be your porchno's neck piece.
7. Move the tube around the edge of the opening where your feet will go (See diagram D).
8. Add fringe to the edges of your porchno if you desire. This can also be done using embroidery, or drawing and even details of your design.

Important Notes

1. If pieces of yarn are included to get you started, the suggested plantings attached against your air source. If you want to make more projects.
2. If you have more than one set of needles, please to remove.
3. Do not use the needle to touch the air source, as this may damage the machine.
4. You must maintain proper tension on the graft through the tension piece, otherwise you may drop a graft.
5. When stitching, do not move the graft in and through the needle in the needle.
6. Do not use graft that is too long or too short. (Suggested graft length is 12).
7. Once you are in a tube (12 x 12) rectangle of the needle, you can make the top of your head with a permanent marker (with which suggestions) to indicate a complete solution.
8. As you turn the needle, pull out your needle piece from underneath. Watch out for the needle.
