

Consumer Building Guide

Mandatory information for consumers

Builders and tradespeople must give you a copy of this guide before entering into a contract for residential building work that costs more than $25,000. Follow this guide to help protect your rights, make smarter decisions and support your building project.

Protecting consumers under home building laws

Home Fair Trading is the Office of Consumer Affairs regulating residential building work (including building or trade work on single dwellings, office houses and townhouses) under the Home Building Act 1989.

What to consider before work starts

Licensing

Licensing requirements include:

- Builders and tradespeople carrying out residential building work must have more than $25,000 insurance covered by NSW Home Trading Scheme or $100,000 for the first trading period or by rating 10-12/10.
- Registration of the contractor is required as always required for residential work (i.e. planning, siting, construction and registration, structural work and painting).
- If the work requires more than one tradesperson, you need a builder to manage the building project and coordinate the tradespeople, such as plumbers, electricians and carpenters.

Home Building Compensation Scheme

The Home Building Compensation Authority (HBCC) regulates home building compensation (HBCC) cover in NSW. HBCC cover is required where work is worth more than $25,000 (including labour and materials). The builder or tradesperson must give you evidence of HBCC cover before they start work or you signed or accepted from any money, including a deposit. For more information or to check the validity of your cover, visit the website or call 13 15 32.

Agreements

To help your building project go smoothly:

- Check with your headcontractor or subcontractor whether an appropriate your building work exists.
- Engage a building certifier. This is your responsibility, not the builder's.

Contracts and payments

All contracts must be in writing. The two main contract forms are:

- Fixed price or lump sum – where the builder or tradesperson agrees upfront to a fixed amount for the whole job. Differences/changes during construction may affect the final cost.
- Cost plus overhead – where your headcontractor pays for the job before the contractor's work allows the project's future progress then final cost (including materials). The contractor agrees the builder has verified direct and indirect costs and fees (regular intervals). It is good practice for the builder to give a cost-plus estimate before starting, and trade costs with you, against the project's budgeted estimate.

Residential building work worth less than $25,000 must be done under a fixed price contract. The written contract must be signed and agreed by or on behalf of each party. It may specify that work beyond the set figure is not included. It must contain:

- the parties names, including the name of the builder or the contractor named as agent or the contractor's name;
- the number of the contract issued;
- a description of the work;
- any plans or specifications for the work; and
- the contract price, if known.

Residential building work worth more than $25,000 requires a full home building contract. As well as all of the requirements of the fixed price contract, it must:
