

AUSTRALIAN VOCATIONAL QUALIFICATION SYSTEM – AVQS QUALITY FRAMEWORK STANDARDS
Purpose: Standards ensure that AQF qualifications issued by LTOs are consistent with Training Packages and accredited courses and have integrity for employment and/or further study, and that LTOs operate ethically with due consideration of learners' and enterprises' needs.
LTO GOVERNANCE AND ADMINISTRATION
7.	Organisational processes are quality assured - A self-initiated evaluation process is conducted annually with the outcomes used to inform quality assurance; - Evaluation outcomes are supplemented by other relevant information, feedback and data to systematically and continually improve training and assessment.
8.	Learners and clients are assured of effective LTO administration and governance - LTO has a management team with the appropriate skills and expertise to lead an educational organisation; - LTO is incorporated in Australia or a government operated entity; - An LTOs current ratio (current assets divided by current liabilities) meets the minimum requirement set by the NSSC, at all times during its period of license; - LTO meets requirements for financial viability and fit and proper person requirements, unless it is a: - government operated entity; or - Australian University; or - employer or volunteer association whose learners solely consist of its employees or members who are not charged fees for the training or assessment.
9.	Legal and accountable operations are evident - Compliance with all requirements of the Australian Qualifications Framework; - Compliance with and full and timely cooperation with the AVQS regulator; - Compliance with relevant Commonwealth and State legislation, including for the Unique Student Identifier; work, health and safety; privacy; access, equity and discrimination, including disability standards; and corporate regulation obligations; - Hold insurance for public liability throughout the period of its license.

Training and assessment (Standards 1-4)

As outlined earlier, a range of stakeholders have expressed concerns over a number of years on the inconsistent quality of training and assessment of providers, which in turn has undermined the integrity and value of vocational qualifications held by all individual learners and employees. Throughout the review to date, there has been strong stakeholder consensus for a need to clearly re-focus the standards on the core function of training providers; that is, their investment and capacity to consistently deliver quality training and assessment. While sound business processes are essential to support training provider viability and sustainability, the shared view was that they underpin the real business of vocational education and training, which is quality teaching and assessment. In effect, a balance between these two domains of education and business needs to be achieved; one that assures learners, clients, industry, and government of the quality of the learning process and its outcomes, as well as the continuity of service provision.

Key changes proposed by the NSSC in relation to strengthening the consistency and quality of training and assessment are discussed below, with further details of the rationale for the proposed changes and their relationship to existing standards provided at Appendix A.
