Midterm Examination
Logic (Deduction and Inductive)

Name: _____
Course: _____

General Instruction: Read the given instructions for each part of the test, do not just read them but understand them. The exams are composed of different parts, in which the test comes from all the topics being discussed in class. On parts 1 to 2, please write your answer in capital letters. Except for sentence-type answers, no erasures or alterations are permitted on any level of the test. Use a black ballpoint pen only on the test, pencils are not allowed. You will be given an extra sheet so that you can make use of the answer sheet and pass it cleanly.

Part 1. True or False (2points)

Read the statements below and determine whether they are true or false. If you believe the following statement is false, write judge, if it is true, write propositions.

1. _____
The proposition that is true in any way possible is known as contingent, in which the subject backs up the premises and the premises claim their subject.

2. _____
A necessary proposition is the fact that the attributes indicated in the predicate term cannot be excluded from the subject.

3. _____
The proposition that having a predicate term with attributes that are not primarily predicated on the subject term is known as judgment.

4. _____
We must consider the structure of the sentence or paragraph as one of the necessary steps if we are to render our judgment.

5. _____
In the philosophy of language, a proposition is a concept that bears a true or false factor in a sentence. Thus is a statement that can be true or false, but not both at the same time.

6. _____
Consider the proposition to have true value if it is intended to deliver information. If such an evaluation agrees with reality, the proposition is said to be true, otherwise, the proposition is said to be false.

7. _____
In syllogistic or traditional logic, a categorical proposition is a proposition or statement in which the predicate is affirmed or denied for all or part of the subject without qualification. The A, E, I, and O propositions are examples of non-categorical propositions.

8. _____
"The world is crazy and numb," is a sample of multiple propositions.

9. _____
If the copula confirms the subject's predicate, the proposition is affirmative. Example: "Alvin is the one."

10. _____
Example: "None of the people are members of the unidentified foreign object," if the copula denies the subject's predicate.

11. _____
The specific proposition will always include a hint of some, and the structure will always be negative. "Some cakes are juice," for example.

12. _____
One of the four standard types of categorical proposition is a "A" proposition, which has an affirmative structure. "All dogs are part of the animal world," for example.

13. _____
Judgment is a mental activity in which two things and predicate are compared. Logical judgment is concerned with the relationship between concepts and their agreement and disagreement.

14. _____
We must confirm and conclude that if the two premises above are universally negative, they will be considered proposition "O," which negates the predicate's claim from its two given subjects.

15. _____
If only one subject applies to a single predicate, the proposition is singular. For example, "Kidapawan is a city in Mindanao."

16. _____
The diagram below is an example of a "A" proposition. "All apples are sweet," for example. We can use the "apple" as the inner circle and the "sweet" as the outer circle.

17. _____
The diagram below will be referred to as the "O" proposition. For instance, if we say, "Some juices are not bread," we can conclude that the "juice" will never be bread and the "bread" will never become juice.

18. _____
One feature of indefinite propositions is that there is no indication of quantity or quality on the statement. It is at this point that we must transform the sentence so that we can draw a conclusion from it.

19. _____
Because we are concluding and excluding some part of the general, an exclusive proposition makes a specific statement. It is the point at which we generalize a portion of the whole.

20. _____
The subject and predicate terms of the given must be retained in the opposite position in the concept of opposite propositions.
