|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 1 (a) memory B/T cells do not recognise new antigens;antibodies previously produced are not effective;shape not complementary to new antigen;takes time to produce effective antibodies;        | 2 max | The immune response is a specific defence mechanism, so different antigens stimulate different B and T cells.                                           |
| (b) mitochondria provide more ATP;more RER/ribosomes synthesise proteins;more Golgi body secretes/modifies or packages proteins/produces glycoproteins;(B lymphocytes) produce antibodies;      | 4     | Stimulated B cells (lymphocytes) are known as plasma cells and have undergone cellular changes associated with the production of antibodies (proteins). |
| 2 (a) formation of vesicle/phagocytosis;derived from plasma membrane;                                                                                                                                   | 2     | 'Engulfment' is not sufficient for a mark.                                                                                                              |
| (b) (i) lysosome;                                                                                                                                                                                           | 1     |                                                                                                                                                         |
| (ii) contain hydrolytic enzymes;to break down/digest bacterium;                                                                                                                                         | 2     | Lysosomes have a number of different roles in cells – this is just one of them.                                                                         |
| 3 (a) injection of antigens;stimulates the formation of memory cells;(antigen from) attenuated microorganism/non-virulent microorganisms/deadmicroorganisms/isolated frommicroorganism; | 2 max | The first two mark points are sufficient. You do not need to know the different types of vaccines described.                                            |
| (b) (i) antibodies are specific to mumps antigen;secondary antibodies specific to mumps antibody;                                                                                                       | 1 max | The important idea is the specificity of the antibody to the antigen.                                                                                   |
| (ii) removes unbound secondary antibodies;otherwise enzyme may be present/may get colour change anyway/false positive;                                                                                  | 2     |                                                                                                                                                         |
| (iii) no antibodies to bind (to antigen);therefore secondary antibody (with the enzyme) will not bind;no enzyme/enzyme-carrying antibody present (after washing in step 4);                         | 2 max | Ensure you are very precise in your answer, particularly when referring to antibody and secondary antibody.                                             |
| 4 (a) stimulates memory cells;antibodies produced quicker;                                                                                                                                              | 2 max | This is the secondary response, resulting in a greater amount of antibody being produced.                                                               |
