Statistical Analysis of fMRI Data, second edition F. Gregory Ashby, 2019-09-17 A guide to all aspects of experimental design and data analysis for fMRI experiments completely revised and updated for the second edition Functional magnetic resonance imaging fMRI which allows researchers to observe neural activity in the human brain noninvasively has revolutionized the scientific study of the mind An fMRI experiment produces massive amounts of highly complex data for researchers to analyze This book describes all aspects of experimental design and data analysis for fMRI experiments covering every step from preprocessing to advanced methods for assessing functional connectivity as well as the most popular multivariate approaches The goal is not to describe which buttons to push in the popular software packages but to help researchers understand the basic underlying logic the assumptions the strengths and weaknesses and the appropriateness of each method The field of fMRI research has advanced dramatically in recent years in both methodology and technology and this second edition has been completely revised and updated Six new chapters cover experimental design functional connectivity analysis through the methods of psychophysiological interactions and beta series regression decoding using multi voxel pattern analysis dynamic causal modeling and representational similarity analysis Other chapters offer new material on recently discovered problems related to head movements the multivariate GLM meta analysis and other topics All complex derivations now appear at the end of the relevant chapter to improve readability A new appendix describes how to build a design matrix with effect coding for group analysis As in the first edition MATLAB code is provided with which readers can implement many of the methods described

New Fundamental Technologies in Data Mining Kimito Funatsu, 2011-01-21 The progress of data mining technology and large public popularity establish a need for a comprehensive text on the subject The series of books entitled by Data Mining address the need by presenting in depth description of novel mining algorithms and many useful applications In addition to understanding each section deeply the two books present useful hints and strategies to solving problems in the following chapters The contributing authors have highlighted many future research directions that will foster multi disciplinary collaborations and hence will lead to significant development in the field of data mining

Modeling Individual Differences in Perceptual Decision Making Joseph W. Houpt, Cheng-Ta Yang, James T. Townsend, 2017-01-18 To deal with the abundant amount of information in the environment in order to achieve our goals human beings adopt a strategy to accumulate some information and filter out other information to ultimately make decisions Since the development of cognitive science in the 1960s researchers have been interested in understanding how human beings process and accumulate information for decision making Researchers have conducted extensive behavioral studies and applied a wide range of modeling tools to study human behavior in simple detection tasks and two choice decision tasks e g discrimination classification In general researchers often assume that the manner in which information is processed for decision making is invariant across individuals given a particular experimental context Independent variables including speed accuracy instructions stimulus properties i e intensity and characteristics of the participants i e aging cognitive ability are assumed to affect the parameters in a model i e speed of information accumulation response bias but not the way that participants process information e g the order of information processing Given these assumptions much modeling has been accomplished based on the grouped data rather than the individual data However a growing number of studies have demonstrated that there were individual differences in the perceptual decision process In the same task context different groups of the participants may process information in different manners The capacity and architecture of the decision mechanism were found to vary across individuals implying that humans decision strategies can vary depending on the context to maximize their performance In this special issue we focused on a particular subset of cognitive models particularly accumulator models multinomial processing trees and systems factorial technology SFT as applied to perceptual decision making The motivation for the focus on perceptual decision making is threefold Empirical studies of perception have grown out of a history of making a large number of observations for each individual so as to achieve precise estimates of each individual's performance This type of data rather than a small number of observations per individual is most amenable to achieving precision in individual level and group level cognitive modeling Second the interaction between the acquisition of perceptual information and the decisions based on that information to the extent that those processes are distinguishable offers rich data for scientific exploration Finally there is an increasing interest in the practical application of individual variation in perceptual ability whether to inform perceptual training and expertise or to guide personnel decisions Although these practical applications are beyond the scope of this issue we hope that the research presented herein may serve as the foundation for future endeavors in that domain
